

UPLOADED CHARACTER

The character's personality has been uploaded onto a computer chip. These chips can then be inserted into an android to give the personality a body again. An uploaded character counts as a Robot, but must pay two extra Character Points for the trait. The advantage is that the character can be placed in a new body if needed. For example, a character could be immediately given a new body if her old one was destroyed, or she could have a 'wardrobe' of android forms that she swaps between as needed ("this is my usual android body, and that's my party android body, and that giant battleship off the port bow is my fighting body").

Any body must have a compatible chip slot; chip slots can be added to other robots by building them as Minor Gadgets. This Trait is at least Technology Level 6.
